It's honestly hard to find the words to describe how special it was to have Erin Wallis be a part of our wedding day. After reviewing different photographer options it was very clear that Erin would be the perfect fit to capture the most memorable day of our lives! Browsing through Erin's photos really confirmed that her island roots and love for the ocean would compliment our bohemian beachside wedding. In a way choosing Erin was like falling in love, when you find the one you'll just know.

The morning of our wedding was full of excitement and being around close friends and family made our hearts full. Any tension or nerves that my husband and I might have been feeling quickly dissipated when Erin arrived due to her warm and kind demeanour. It was so easy to be present and enjoy each moment knowing that Erin was always one step ahead of us and constantly creating magic through her creativity and attention to detail. Although we booked Erin as our photographer, she wore many hats that day. If I was feeling parched or losing my spark she would get my bridesmaids and I to have a quick break to refuel and replenish. She also would ensure that my gown and veil were on point throughout our wedding day and this allowed me to truly have no worries. I remember being so ecstatic that I couldn't wipe the smile off my face and Erin totally embraced these emotions that we were experiencing that day, and made us feel completely comfortable in our own skin. She definitely knows how to direct you into the perfect pose and has no problem wrangling loved ones to include everyone in the photos. Her sense of humour and encouragement throughout the day was much needed and appreciated, especially to get those brilliant shots on the mountaintop while my husband and I were getting attacked by swarms of mosquitos. Little do people know but veils serve as the perfect mosquito net and this innovative idea from Erin created a lovely and intimate photo. Erin is truly a master of her trade and we had no problem following her lead. We had some change in plans on our wedding day (that no one would ever know about) and these changes were suggested by Erin to ensure that the natural lighting surrounding us would compliment our photos and include the gorgeous scenery that Vancouver Island has to offer.

If you desire a photographer who captures light and love from all angles and creates photos that are breathtaking and beautiful, Erin Wallis is the one. Our photos will be forever cherished and thanks to you Erin our wedding memories will be reminisced often and never forgotten!

Lots of love, Robyn & Kane
